Spin it Neera. That's what you do. Compare French turnout to U.K. Youth vote from 40s to 70s there. Abysmal in France.

But you did crush Trump by tacking right and winning over moderate R's rather than expanding electorate, so it's a proven strategy. Oh wait.

Clinton helped trump win.

1) Force all Republican candidates to lock themselves into extreme conservative positions that will hurt them in a general election;

2) Undermine any credibility/trust Republican presidential candidates have to make inroads to our coalition or independents;

3) [redacted] on any potential [redacted]

Operationalizing the Strategy

[redacted]

There are two ways to approach the strategies mentioned above. The first is to use the field as a whole to inflict damage on itself similar to what happened to Mitt Romney in 2012. The variety of candidates is a positive here, and many of the lesser known can serve as a cudgel to move the more established candidates further to the right. In this scenario, we don't want to marginalize the more extreme candidates, but make them more "Pied Piper" candidates who actually represent the mainstream of the Republican Party. Pied Piper candidates include, but aren't limited to:

- Ted Cruz
- [redacted]
- Ben Carson

We need to be [redacted] candidates so that they are leaders of the pack and [redacted] to them seriously.

It's actually unbelievable that the NYT & @Yamiche are trying to exploit today's shootings to push this narrative nytimes.com/2017/06/14/us/...

> But long before the shooting on Wednesday, some of Mr. Sanders's supporters had earned a belligerent reputation for their criticism of Hillary Clinton, the Democratic Party and others who they believed disagreed with their ideas. Sanders fans, sometimes referred to derogatorily as "Bernie Bros" or "Bernie Bots," at times harassed reporters covering Mr. Sanders and flooded social media with angry posts directed at the "corporate media," a term often used by the senator.

To win back popular affection & trust, crucial to not merely to campaign "on" these items -- also must demonstrate, model it as a candidate.

> For progressives in the United States, this is a critical lesson. In 2016, when Democrats held the presidency, it may have been hard for them to argue against the status quo. But now, shut out of control of the presidency and the two chambers of Congress, Democrats can and should campaign on an agenda that challenges the status-quo politics of Washington. They should campaign to truly drain the swamp. That means offering reforms of our public corruption laws to ensure that we truly end pay-to-play politics, advancing campaign finance reforms that end the practice of dark money flooding elections and closing the revolving door between lobbyists and the government. Real reforms should show progressive leaders on the side of people instead of a political system that seems rigged against them.

The big and important takeaway:

> Just as in France, an aggressive agenda for political reform in the United States can demonstrate to the public that progressive candidates don't accept a status-quo politics that isn't delivering. And it can be a strong rebuttal to ethno-nationalist populism, whose wave may have finally crested in France.

Did you read the plan? It's a jobs guarantee that would employ roughly 4 million working class people. Like you can't see past your lens

You mean the language Trump "allegedly" used. Again, there is no proof. You have to be walked through this step-by-step?

Neera Tanden, Center for American Progress president and member of the Clinton 2016 transition team, worried about a residual effect from the FBI's announcement:

> Resist. Neera Tanden @neeratanden

This may make it easier for you:

addressing a highly sensitive investigation on facts that he considered material to that investigation. Indeed, he conveyed that information confidentially to his top aides and later said that he wanted the information to be given to the special counsel because it was important to the investigation.

Many in the media have tried to spin this as not a "leak" because leaks by definition only involve classified information. That is entirely untrue as shown by history. Leaks involve the release of unauthorized information - not only classified information. Many of the most important leaks historically have involved pictures and facts not classified but embarrassing to a government. More federal rules and regulations. He is suggesting that any federal employee effectively owns documents created during federal employment in relation to an ongoing investigation so long as they address the information to themselves. FBI agents routinely write such memos in investigations. They are called 302s to memorialize field interviews or fact acquisitions. They are treated as FBI information.

The Justice Department routinely claims such memos as privileged and covered by the deliberative process privilege and other privileges. Indeed, if this information were sought under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) it would likely have been denied. Among other things, the memo is unclassified information. Assuming that the memos were not classified (though it seems odd that it would not be classified even on the confidential level), there is 18 U.S.C. 641, which makes it a crime to steal, sell, or convey "any record, voucher, money, or thing of value of the United States or of any department or agency thereof."

There are also ethical and departmental rules against the use of material to damage a former represented person or individual or firm related to prior representation. The FBI website warns employees that "dissemination of FBI information is made strictly in accordance with provisions of the Privacy Act, Title 5, United States Code, Sectio

Just like Kansas. I have no faith in Tom Perez at all. Nor do I trust him. theguardian.com/commentisfree/…

> Given our current political climate, you'd think the Democrats would have jumped at the chance to take back a Congressional seat and demonstrate opposition to Trump. but you'd be wrong. While Thompson managed to raise $292,000 without his party's help, 95% of which came from individuals, neither the DNC, DCCC, nor even the Kansas Democratic Party would help him grow that total in any substantial way. His campaign requested $20,000 from the state Democratic Party and was denied.
> They later relented and gave him $3,000. (According to the FEC, the Party had about $145,000 on hand.) The national Democratic Party gave him nothing until the day before the election, when it graced him with some live calls and robo-calls. He lost by seven percentage points.
> In an interview with The Washington Post, Perez confirmed the DNC would not be giving Thompson a dime. "We can make progress in Kansas," he said. "There are thousands of elections every year, though. Can we invest in all of them? That would require a major increase in funds." Fact check: the DNC has a fund just for Congressional elections, of which there are just ten this year.

TRUMP CAMPAIGN ANNOUNCES NATIONAL SECURITY ADVISORY COUNCIL

New York, NY — Today, Donald J. Trump announced the appointment of several key members to his national security advisory council following a roundtable meeting in New York. Mr. Trump's national security team is comprised of some of the brightest minds in foreign policy, nuclear non-proliferation, combating ISIS and rebuilding our national defense.

This distinguished group stands behind Mr. Trump because it is imperative that the U.S. has a strong leader to combat terrorism, strengthen its borders and make sure that America is safe. They recognize that America's national security and foreign relations have been Among many things I loved about this article, this one is my favorite. I love her for saying it out loud.

> during the campaign at least, the negative stories didn't seem to stick to him with the same adhesion. And even now, as investigations of his administration's connections to Russia splash across front pages, the Times has launched a new feature, a weekly call to readers to "Say something nice" about him. I ask Clinton if she's seen it. "I did!" she says with a wide smile, taking a beat. "I never saw them do that for me."

And yet you defend a woman, and system, known globally as neo-colonialism?

Why do you erase global south voices?

Sustainable Development with Equality, Dignity and Justice for All
Realizing women's human rights and gender equality for present and future generations

1. Preamble

We, the women from the Global South who participated in the inaugural Global South Women's Forum on Sustainable Development in Phnom Penh, Cambodia between 27 September 2016 to 3 October 2016[1], reaffirm our commitment to women's human rights in the implementation of the sustainable development agenda.

We see this commitment as essential in the context of a neoliberal, neocolonial and patriarchal model of development that only serves to deplete our planet and violate our human rights. We are deeply concerned that despite the goals espoused by the sustainable development declaration, there has been little to no state accountability in terms of gender equality and women's human rights. This is also in light of existing binding international commitments, as well as national constitutional protections and guarantees.

One of the vacant seats is a safe Dem seat in CA, so 24 seats needed to flip, which I think is what Neera is saying in her tweet.

This is what I say to the 217 GOP House Members who voted to rip health care from their fellow Americans:
Winter is coming.

Everyone, start donating whatever you can to destroy the GOP in 2018. Register folks now. This will be their undoing.

Yep. A 'yes' vote on Trumpcare will now be a disqualifying preexisting condition for anyone seeking reelection in 2018

This is such an awful day.

They've assigned me and so many people I care about to our deaths.

It cannot stand.

AHCA vote made it clear: GOP leaders are trying to crush affordable health care. We can't let it happen in VA. Together, we can stop this.
